

JARRET CARTER SR.

Founder of HBCU Digest

Jarrett L. Carter, Sr. is the Founding Editor of HBCU Digest, an online daily news blog dedicated to coverage of historically black colleges and universities throughout the United States. He is also the host of HBCU Digest Radio, a weekly talk radio program covering societal, cultural and institutional issues at HBCUs, and the Founder and Executive Director of the Center for HBCU Media Advocacy, a national non-profit organization working to enhance HBCUs' new media and media outreach opportunities. In 2008 he founded Carter Media Enterprises, a new media development and consulting company with a focus on coverage of African-American news and lifestyle.

A native of Seat Pleasant, MD, Carter graduated from Morgan State University, an HBCU, in 2003 with a Bachelor's degree in English with a journalism concentration.

Carter lives in Baltimore with his wife, Dr. LaKeita D. Carter and two sons, Jarrett, Jr. and Landen.
